1 The White/Hernandez plaintiffs file this memorandum in opposition to the ex
 2 parte application of defendants Trans Union LLC, Equifax Information Services
 3 LLC and the Acosta/Pike plaintiffs for an order modifying the hearing and briefing 4 schedule on the motion for preliminary approval of settlement, requiring the 5 White/Hernandez plaintiffs to produce documents and make declarants available for 6 depositions, and striking their brief for noncompliance with the local rules. For the 7 reasons set forth below, that application is wholly unjustified and should be rejected 8 in its entirety.

9 BACKGROUND

10 In late September 2006, the White/Hernandez plaintiffs and the parties to the 11 Acosta/Pike Settlement commenced a lengthy and difficult negotiating process 12 relating to the litigation of the matters presently before this Court. Those 13 negotiations culminated in a Stipulation and Order relating to Discovery and 14 Scheduling Matters (the "Stipulated Order") in which the White/Hernandez 15 plaintiffs reluctantly made a number of highly significant concessions, including:

16 (a) an agreement that stayed discovery in their actions against Trans Union 17 and Equifax for four months pending the filing and resolution of the 18 Acosta/Pike parties' motion for preliminary approval of a proposed settlement (the "Settlement") that they had been secretly discussing with each other since the beginning of the year;

19 (b) a schedule that gave the Acosta/Pike parties until November 17, 2006—20 three months from the time counsel for Trans Union informed this Court that the class-wide claims in the White/Hernandez cases had been "settled" (and 21 two months from the time of the final mediation session before Justice John H. Trotter)—to file their motion for preliminary approval and until January 8, 22 2007 to file their reply; and 23 (c) a hearing date for their preliminary approval motion that would not take place until January 22, 2007.

24 In exchange for these concessions, the White/Hernandez plaintiffs obtained 25 the right to:

26 (a) present their objections to the Settlement at the preliminary approval 27 hearing without the need for filing a formal motion to intervene; and 28 (b) certain very limited discovery pertaining to the Settlement (namely, copies of any documents that were exchanged by the parties during the

1 negotiating process, copies of the very limited discovery responses that Trans 2 Union gave in the Acosta case and the right to depose any witnesses that would be testifying in favor of the proposed settlement).

3 From the outset, the White/Hernandez plaintiffs took the position that the 4 hearing should take place in early to mid-December, but the Acosta/Pike parties 5 insisted that it be delayed until late January because of the time that they ostensibly 6 needed to produce the limited and readily available discovery the White/Hernandez 7 plaintiffs had requested and to finalize their Settlement and supporting papers. In 8 the end, the White/Hernandez plaintiffs reluctantly agreed to the January 22, 2007 9 date—confident that, given this Court’s declared policy concerning the sanctity of 10 hearing dates, there would be no further delay.

11 The agreed schedule gave counsel for the White/Hernandez plaintiffs a 12 limited four-week window between the November 17, 2006 deadline for the filing 13 of the preliminary approval motion and the December 15, 2006 deadline for the 14 filing of their opposition to review the Acosta/Pike parties’ documents, depose their 15 witnesses, prepare the White/Hernandez plaintiffs’ opposition brief and work with 16 their experts to complete declarations in support of that brief.

17 To facilitate their ability to meet the demands of that difficult schedule, the 18 White/Hernandez plaintiffs negotiated and obtained the Acosta/Pike plaintiffs’ 19 consent to provide them with a copy of the finalized Settlement by November 7, 20 2006. The Acosta/Pike plaintiffs violated that agreement and, as a result, the 21 White/Hernandez plaintiffs did not see the Settlement until the Acosta/Pike parties 22 filed their motion for preliminary approval on November 17, 2006.

23 Furthermore, though the Stipulated Order (at ¶ 4) required them “to produce 24 all documents exchanged with the Acosta and/or the Pike plaintiffs, relating to the 25 settlement and the mediation process,” Trans Union and Equifax refused to provide 26 the White/Hernandez plaintiffs any drafts of the Settlement that they exchanged 27 with the Acosta/Pike plaintiffs following the final mediation session before Justice 28 Trotter on September 14, 2006. In so doing, defendants correctly maintained that

1 the discovery to which the White/Hernandez plaintiffs were entitled was strictly 2 limited to that set forth in the Stipulated Order, but wrongly asserted that the post-3 mediation settlement drafts were not covered by that order.

4 As a consequence of the Acosta/Pike parties refusal to comply with their 5 commitments, the challenging schedule that the White/Hernandez plaintiffs had 6 negotiated became that much more difficult. During the four weeks they had to 7 prepare their Opposition, counsel for the White/Hernandez plaintiffs were taxed to 8 the limits of their endurance as they worked long hours, late into the night and 9 through the Thanksgiving holiday to meet the December 15 deadline.<sup>1</sup>

10 Prior to filing their Opposition,<sup>2</sup> counsel for the White/Hernandez plaintiffs 11 reviewed the Local Rules of this District—focusing their attention on the local 12 analogues to Fed. R. Civ. P. 5, entitled “Service and Filing of Pleadings and Other 13 Papers,” and Fed. R. Civ. P. 7, entitled “Pleadings Allowed, Forms of Motion”, 14 including, in particular, Local Rule 7-9 entitled “Opposing Papers.” As no page 15 limits are contained in those rules and as no other rule appeared to be relevant, 16 counsel for the White/Hernandez plaintiffs mistakenly believed that no page limits 17 existed for briefs under the Local Rules. They did not think to review the local 18 analogue to Fed. R. Civ. P. 11, mistakenly assuming that, like its federal 19 counterpart, that rule was limited to signing requirements and sanctions.
 20 Accordingly, counsel for the White/Hernandez plaintiffs were unaware of the page 21 limits contained in Local Rule 11-6 and ended up filing a brief that substantially

22 <sup>1</sup> Given the Acosta/Pike parties insistence on needing three months from the time 23 they announced they had reached agreement on a “settlement” to the time they 24 would be ready to file it with the Court, the White/Hernandez plaintiffs reasonably 25 assumed that it would be undergoing substantial revision. Thus, they were not able 26 to begin working with their experts in earnest, to review and analyze the credit 27 reports from which their databases were created or to draft their opposition until the 28 Acosta/Pike parties’ motion was filed on November 17.

<sup>2</sup> The Acosta/Pike parties accuse (ex parte at 5) the White/Hernandez plaintiffs of not serving defendants until 6:30 p.m. on the day their Opposition was due and of not serving the Acosta/Pike plaintiffs at all. In fact, the White/Hernandez plaintiffs served their Opposition on all of the Acosta/Pike parties by regular mail before it was filed and e-mailed defendants a courtesy copy that same day at 6:30 p.m.

1 exceeded those limits without seeking leave to do so.

2 Upon learning of their error from counsel for Trans Union, counsel for the 3 White/Hernandez plaintiffs filed an ex parte application seeking a nunc pro tunc 4 waiver of Local Rule 11-6's page limits on their Opposition and apologized to this 5 Court and all counsel for not having done so before.<sup>3</sup>

6 Seizing on this error, the Acosta/Pike parties are now trying to use it as an 7 excuse to undo the Stipulated Order they negotiated by enlarging from 24 to 66 8 days (an increase of 275%) the time by which they would be required to file their 9 reply and by postponing the hearing date by two months—all to the detriment of 10 the White/Hernandez plaintiffs and the classes they seek to represent whose claims 11 would remain stayed in the interim. This Court should not sanction this kind of 12 cynical gamesmanship.

13 ARGUMENT

14 By their present ex parte application, the Acosta/Pike parties request that this 15 Court strike the White/Hernandez plaintiffs' Opposition and undo the Stipulated 16 Order by granting them a 40-day extension to file their reply and a 60-day 17 postponement of the hearing date. As they neither filed nor joined the Acosta/Pike 18 plaintiffs' motion for preliminary approval of the Settlement, neither Trans Union 19 (which is the only party to have signed the ex parte application) nor Equifax have 20 any standing to seek such relief. Furthermore, the fact that the Acosta/Pike 21 plaintiffs appear to have joined in an application that would prevent this Court from 22 having access to the arguments and authorities that would enable it to determine 23 whether the Settlement is in the interest of the classes they seek to represent itself 24 demonstrates that they are incapable of fulfilling that role. However, leaving aside 25 the fact that defendants cannot seek the relief set forth in this application and that 26 the Acosta/Pike plaintiffs should not be seeking it, there is no basis whatsoever for 27 <sup>3</sup> The reasons why this Court should deny the Acosta/Pike parties request that it 28 strike the White/Hernandez plaintiffs' Opposition are fully set forth in that ex parte application, which are adopted herein by reference.

1 granting the Acosta/Pike parties' requests, which would require this Court to 2 rewrite the Stipulated Order they negotiated and which would be seriously 3 prejudicial to the White/Hernandez plaintiffs and the classes they seek to represent.

4 I. The Fact That The White/Hernandez Plaintiffs Inadvertently Filed An 5 Opposition That Exceeds Local Rule 11-6's Page Limits Without First 6 Seeking Leave To Do So Provides No Basis For Relieving The 7 Acosta/Pike* Parties Of Their Obligation To Adhere To the Scheduling
 8 Order They Negotiated.

9 The principal reason the Acosta/Pike parties have given for their requested 10 postponement is that the White/Hernandez plaintiffs filed an Opposition that 11 exceeds the page limits set forth in Local Rule 11-6 without first seeking leave to 12 do so.

13 The premise underlying this argument is that the page limitations in the Local 14 Rules are intended for the benefit of the litigants. That, of course, is incorrect.
 15 Those rules are for the benefit of this Court, which, as set forth below, would have 16 been deprived of information essential to its ability to make an informed and 17 intelligent ruling on the Acosta/Pike parties' motion had the White/Hernandez 18 plaintiffs addressed the multitude of issues in that motion in a brief of just 25 pages.

19 The Acosta/Pike parties complain, however, that the White/Hernandez 20 plaintiffs' submission of a more comprehensive Opposition than they anticipated 21 leaves them with what they now deem to be insufficient time to prepare their 22 response. The Acosta/Pike parties would have found themselves in the same 23 predicament they are in now had the White/Hernandez plaintiffs filed a shorter 24 opposition, as any such opposition would have made the same arguments (albeit in 25 a much abbreviated and less informative form) and been supported by the same 26 declarations and evidence as the brief they did file.

27 In short, the Acosta/Pike parties' present problems are a function not of the 28 length of the White/Hernandez opposition, but of the fatally defective Settlement they are trying to push past this Court, the tainted negotiating process that led to that Settlement and the glaring deficiencies in the Acosta/Pike plaintiffs' legal team

1 that defendants hand-picked to be their partners in that process. Needless to say, 2 these are problems that the Acosta/Pike parties could not cure whether they were 3 given 24 days or 24 weeks to prepare their reply.

4 At any rate, the White/Hernandez plaintiffs cannot be responsible for the 5 Acosta/Pike parties' dissatisfaction with their own agreement giving themselves 24 6 days for that reply. It was, after all, the Acosta/Pike parties' decision to frontload 7 the schedule by giving themselves three months after they had announced their 8 Settlement to file their preliminary approval motion. Moreover, the 24 days 9 allowed for the Acosta/Pike parties' reply is much longer than the normal reply 10 period and, indeed, is almost as long as the period allotted for the White/Hernandez 11 plaintiffs' opening brief.

12 Likewise, it was the Acosta/Pike parties' decision (no doubt borne of 13 necessity) to file a brief in support of their Settlement that made no effort to 14 calculate the litigation value of their claims, to quantify the cash value of the 15 Settlement's economic benefits or to ascertain the impact of its injunctive relief 16 provisions on preventing the challenged practices from recurring. Furthermore, 17 though virtually all of the White/Hernandez plaintiffs' challenges to the settlement 18 had been previewed in their reply brief in support of their motion to consolidate, the 19 Acosta/Pike parties chose to completely ignore them in their opening brief. Finally, 20 the Acosta/Pike parties' did not even take four full pages to discuss why class 21 certification is appropriate in these cases—hardly the kind of treatment that would 22 enable this Court to give the kind of “undiluted, even heightened, attention” to the 23 criteria under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 that is required in order to protect the rights of 24 absent class members in the settlement context. Amchem Prods. v. Windsor, 521
25 U.S. 591, 620 (1997). In short, the Acosta/Pike parties could have taken advantage 26 of the three months they had negotiated for themselves to prepare a meaningful 27 defense of their Settlement in an opening brief of their own, but they chose not (or 28 were unable) to do so.

1 Having no other options, the Acosta/Pike parties resort to misstatement and 2 hyperbole in an effort to persuade this Court to save them from themselves—baldly 3 asserting (at 7) that the White/Hernandez plaintiffs have “willfully disobeyed the 4 rules” and tried “to put one over on the court.” Not only are these irresponsible 5 accusations unsupported by any evidence whatsoever, they depend on the facially 6 absurd proposition that counsel for the White/Hernandez plaintiffs would risk the 7 striking of their Opposition and everything they had negotiated for—to say nothing 8 of Rule 11 sanctions—on the infinitesimally small chance that they would be able 9 to sneak their transparently non-compliant brief past both this Court and three sets 10 of opposing counsel.

11 Nor should the fact that the White/Hernandez plaintiffs filed a brief that 12 exceeded Rule 11-6’s page limit have come as any surprise to the Acosta/Pike 13 parties. After all, their motion was, in reality, several motions-in-one, including a 14 motion for class certification, a motion for preliminary approval of the Settlement 15 and a motion for appointment of lead class counsel. Those multiple motions (which 16 include a 32 page Settlement and a 9 page proposed order, both of which contain a 17 large number of critical provisions that require separate attention) raise very serious 18 issues of national importance affecting the rights of millions of consumers in two 19 separate complex cases against two different defendants. Under the rules, the 20 White/Hernandez plaintiffs could have filed separate shorter briefs addressing the 21 various distinct motions, two separate briefs in each of the two different cases, 22 and/or separate briefs on behalf of different plaintiffs. See, e.g., Stutz Motor Car of 23 Am. v. Reebok Int’l, 909 F. Supp. 1353, 1358-59 (C.D. Cal. 1995) (rejecting 24 plaintiff’s argument that defendant had violated local page limit rule “by filing two 25 briefs . . . , which combined exceed the thirty-five page limitation,” as there were 26 “two operative complaints, as this is a relatively complex . . . dispute, and as 27 defendant’s papers are not cumulative or prolix”).

28 Nowhere does the Stipulated Order restrict the White/Hernandez plaintiffs

1 from filing multiple briefs or from taking the more sensible option of seeking leave 2 to file a single and lengthier brief in which all of the issues presented in the 3 Acosta/Pike parties' motion could be comprehensively addressed. Such a 4 comprehensive filing in these cases is essential lest this Court be denied access to 5 vital information and arguments that it needs to have in order to make an intelligent 6 and informed judgment about the potential propriety of a Settlement that would 7 affect the statutory rights of some 14 million consumers.

8 It appears, however, that the Acosta/Pike parties assumed that the 9 White/Hernandez plaintiffs would file the same kind of abbreviated, superficial and 10 uninformative brief in opposition to their motions for preliminary approval, class 11 certification and appointment of class representatives and counsel that the 12 Acosta/Pike plaintiffs filed in support of those motions. That they were wrong in 13 that assumption is no basis for relieving them of their obligation to comply with this 14 Court's scheduling order—particularly given this Court's warning that it would 15 tolerate no deviations from such orders except in the most extreme and dire of 16 circumstances. See, e.g., 8/14/06 Hearing Tr., at p. 37 ("And I won't be listening to 17 late filings or continuance reasons. And even a stipulation between all of you—18 these dates, by the way, will never be changed now, unless one of you dies or has a 19 serious illness. And I'm serious about that.").

20 The burden on the Acosta/Pike parties of having to respond to the Opposition 21 within 24 days does not constitute such circumstances. Indeed, if counsel for the 22 White/Hernandez plaintiffs were able to prepare their opening brief and assist their 23 experts in preparing their declarations in support thereof in less than one month, 24 than surely counsel for the Acosta/Pike parties (with all of their resources and 25 manpower) can prepare their reply brief in a similar time frame.

26 At any rate, however difficult it might be for the Acosta/Pike counsel to meet 27 the demands of the schedule they negotiated, there is no justification for making the 28 White/Hernandez plaintiffs suffer the consequences of their poor planning. The January 22, 2007 hearing date represented the absolute outer limit of what the White/Hernandez plaintiffs were willing to agree to and for good reason. Owing in no small part to defendants' litigation tactics, no discovery in the White/Hernandez cases has taken place since those cases were filed more than a year ago. Each day of additional delay is another day in which they and the class members they seek to represent will be prevented from rebuilding their lives, as defendants continue to report erroneous financial information about them—some of which they admit that they have the present ability to correct.<sup>4</sup>

II. The Acosta/Pike Parties Have No Right To Depose The White/Hernandez Plaintiffs' Declarants In Connection With The Present Motions And Their Desire To Do So Provides No Basis For Relieving Them Of Their Obligations Under The Stipulated Order.

As an additional ground for urging this Court to undo the schedule that they negotiated, the Acosta/Pike parties argue that it does not leave them sufficient time to depose the White/Hernandez plaintiffs' declarants or the documents they relied upon. In support of that argument, the Acosta/Pike parties cite the Stipulated Order, which they assert (at 8) obligates the parties "promptly to produce" their declarants for deposition. They are wrong.

By its terms, the Stipulated Order provides (at ¶ 7) that "[t]he parties in the Acosta Federal Action and the Pike action will promptly make each and every individual who submits a declaration in support of the Motion for Preliminary Approval available for deposition, on or before December 8, 2006, to the plaintiffs in the White and Hernandez actions." Knowing that they would not otherwise have sufficient time to depose any witnesses that might be offered in support of preliminary approval, the White/Hernandez plaintiffs negotiated for this provision in partial consideration for their agreeing to a complete stay of all discovery in their <sup>4</sup> In view of such prejudice and all the other circumstances, should this Court be inclined to grant the Acosta/Pike parties an extension of time, it should give them no more than an additional week and, if it is inclined to grant them all the relief they seek, it should lift the stay of discovery in the White/Hernandez cases against Trans Union and Equifax.

1 actions against Trans Union and Equifax. (Stipulated Order at ¶ 2.)<sup>5</sup>

2 In negotiating the Stipulated Order, the Acosta/Pike parties did not seek or 3 obtain any provision that would give them a corresponding right to depose any 4 declarants the White/Hernandez plaintiffs might use or to obligate the 5 White/Hernandez plaintiffs to make those declarants available for deposition in less 6 time than would be required in the ordinary course under Fed. R. Civ. P. 30. The 7 Acosta/Pike parties' failure to do so is fatal to their argument. As Trans Union and 8 Equifax vigorously maintained in refusing the White/Hernandez plaintiffs' demand 9 that they produce drafts of the Settlement, the discovery to which the parties to the 10 Stipulated Order are entitled was strictly limited to what was provided for in that 11 Order. Reckoning that they would have no reason to depose any declarants the 12 White/Hernandez plaintiffs might use, the Acosta/Pike parties did not negotiate for 13 the right to do so and, thus, they have no such right.

14 At any rate, the Acosta/Pike parties were correct in their reckoning. There is 15 no point in their deposing any of the White/Hernandez plaintiffs' experts in 16 connection with the present motion, because nothing they might say can alter the 17 fact that the Settlement is fatally defective, was the product of a tainted negotiating 18 process, and was reached with putative class counsel who were hand-picked by 19 defendants and who have proven themselves unfit to serve in that role.

20 Make no mistake about it, the White/Hernandez plaintiffs are more than 21 willing to produce their experts and other witnesses for deposition. Defendants will 22 be permitted to take those depositions in the context of an adversarial litigation of 23 the merits of this dispute just as soon as they drop their pursuit of their sham 24 Settlement or this Court forces them to do so. They should not, however, be 25 allowed to use their feigned need to depose the White/Hernandez plaintiffs'

26 <sup>5</sup> Despite their agreement to make their deponents promptly available, the 27 Acosta/Pike parties, insisted that if the White/Hernandez plaintiffs wanted to depose 28 their sole expert, Prof. Ronald Mann, they would have to do so at his offices in Austin, Texas and would have to do so over a two-day period for three and one half hours at a time.

1 declarants to further delay justice in this matter or to get out from under the 2 obligations of the Stipulated Order that binds them.

3 In a further effort to avoid their obligations under the Stipulated Order, the 4 Acosta/Pike parties complain (at 8) that the White/Hernandez plaintiffs 5 “sandbagged” them during the negotiations of the schedule, by not “even 6 suggest[ing] that they would have any more than one expert opine in support of 7 their opposition, nor did they discuss any alleged ‘study’ . . . that they would submit 8 with their challenge to preliminary approval.” That is ridiculous. The 9 White/Hernandez plaintiffs made no representations at all about the number of 10 experts they would offer in support of their Opposition because they had no 11 obligation to do so and, frankly, did not know themselves how many they would be 12 using at the time of the negotiations. However, given that this dispute involves the 13 intersection of at least three separate disciplines (credit reporting, credit scoring and 14 bankruptcy) and the Acosta/Pike parties’ knowledge that the White/Hernandez 15 plaintiffs were challenging the integrity of the process leading to its purported 16 resolution, the Acosta/Pike parties had absolutely no basis for assuming that the 17 White/Hernandez plaintiffs would only be producing a single expert witness in 18 support of their Opposition. Needless to say, the White/Hernandez plaintiffs are not 19 responsible for the Acosta/Pike parties’ mistaken assumptions.

20 In a similar vein, the Acosta/Pike parties’ complaint that the 21 White/Hernandez plaintiffs did not tell them what evidence they would be 22 submitting with their challenge to preliminary approval is even less well founded—23 if that is possible. Neither side informed the other of the evidence they would be 24 presenting for or against preliminary approval because they had no obligation to do 25 so.

26 Moreover, Trans Union and Equifax have known about the White/Hernandez 27 plaintiffs’ credit report databases since the filing of the White complaint, which 28 contained allegations highlighting them, more than one year ago—allegations that

1 were also highlighted in this Court's ruling denying Trans Union's motion to 2 dismiss. Yet, despite that knowledge, defendants have resisted all efforts to initiate 3 the discovery process in the White/Hernandez cases that would have given them 4 access to the back-up documentation out of which those databases were created.
 5 Likewise, defendants failed to negotiate for a provision in the Stipulated Order that 6 would have given them a right to seek that documentation (or any other evidence 7 that the White/Hernandez plaintiffs may have chosen to submit) in connection with 8 their present motions. Nonetheless, having nothing to hide, the White/Hernandez 9 plaintiffs have offered to give defendants all the information they need to double 10 check the statistical data contained in their Opposition, including the dates of the 11 error ridden credit reports and the names of the individuals about whom they relate.
 12 That offer was made prior to the filing of the present application—a fact that the 13 Acosta/Pike parties conveniently fail to mention.

14 CONCLUSION

15 For the aforementioned reasons, the Acosta/Pike parties' ex parte application 16 should be denied in its entirety.

17 Dated: December 26, 2006 Respectfully submitted,
